Hi Taylor and Emily,

Over the last six weeks, I've observed a consistent uplift in demand for M&M's Minis Tube 1.77oz across multiple convenience accounts in Texas and Florida. Store managers are asking for additional facings near the checkout, especially in locations with high teen and student traffic.

Currently, most of these outlets carry only the standard Milk Chocolate singles at the counter. In stores where we introduced Minis, unit sales appear to be 25–30% higher versus the previous baseline period, based on POS feedback and my visit notes.

Given this, I would recommend the following:

1. Add Minis to the standard assortment for South-region convenience outlets.

2. Run a 4-week "2 for $3" trial promotion in October, supported by small shelf talkers near the counter.

3. Track store-level sales performance for Minis across the test cluster to build a case for wider rollout.

If you agree with this direction, I can prepare:

- A prioritized list of stores to include in the trial.

- A simple execution checklist for store owners and staff.

Thanks,

Priya
